What is FOG?

FOG stands for Fats, Oils and Grease. You may not think much of scraping your leftover food or cooking grease into the sink, but it can cause trouble for your pipes and the community sewer system.

Some common FOG found in kitchens includes cooking oils, condiments such as salad dressings and sandwich spreads, meat juices and fat, butter, lard, shortening and bacon grease. When FOG is poured down the drain and garbage disposals, it can cause blockages that can cause the sewer to back up into your home or business through sinks, drains and toilets. Here are a few simple things you can do to avoid sewage blockage and increased treatment costs:

- Do not pour fats, oils, or grease down the drain –Cool it, can it and trash it instead! Pour used cooking oil and grease into a can or another sealable container and throw it in the trash when cool.
- Wipe down greasy dishes, pots and pans and cooking utensils with a paper towel and dispose of it in your garbage.
- Use a strainer to catch food scraps and throw them in the trash.

Remember these simple tips this holiday season and throughout the year!
